The Lake Bruce Conservancy District held its monthly meeting Thursday, May 11, in the community room of the Kewanna-Union Township Fire Station. All five directors and six freeholders were present for the meeting.

The minutes of the April meeting and the treasurer's report were approved and correspondence reviewed. One letter was from the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) informing the district that its application for a LARE grant has been approved in the amount of $87,000. The funds will be used for dredging. The project requires 25% matching funds from the conservancy. The bidding process for the dredging work and contacting of contractors will be handled by J. F. New and Associates as part of the conservancy's contract with them. The board will select the contractors and supply the DNR with copies of contracts entered into. The grant money is received as work is performed and billed. Copies of invoices must also be sent to the DNR. At the end of the project, 15% will be withheld pending satisfactory completion of final documents. The district will be required to show payment of its 25% percent of the cost at that time also.

Norm Steigely, conservancy board chairman, went on to say that in his talk with Senator Tom Weatherwax, he was told that the exact amount of area that will be dredged on the west side of the lake still needs to be worked out with the DNR as they have the final determination. John Richardson of J. F. New and Associates sent a document showing the steps and time-line for the dredging project. The final inspection of this stage of the project will be in the spring of 2007 with work starting this fall.

Steigely reported that the other successful LARE grant of $13,000 for weed control ($9,000 for treatment and $4,000 for surveys) has been difficult and very time consuming as a new system has been put in place at the DNR. It requires the conservancy to send out bids for treatment and also for three surveys that are required during the year. The bids have been sent out but only a few have been returned to date. The various lake organizations as well as the companies that do the treatment and those that do the surveys are not happy with the new DNR program. It has proven very costly and cumbersome for all to deal with. The DNR is currently looking at ways to improve the program.

It was reported that the income survey has been completed by the directors. They have made contact with approximately 185 people. The information collected will now be given to the Kankakee-Iroquois Regional Planning Commission for certification. The survey is required before an application can be made for federal funding for the sewer project. Application for funding of this program must be made by a city or county. Steigely and Edwin Busswell of the Kankakee-Iroquois Regional Planning Commission was to meet with the Fulton County Commissioners Monday, May 15 to see if they will place the application for the district for $500,000 to be used to help fund the sewer project.

Tom Davies gave an update on the proposed dry hydrant at Lake Bruce noting that he had talked with Dan Rosswurm at the USDA office in Rochester. Rosswurm supplied much information and a starting point for the hydrant project. He was also able to get the district in touch with Randy Moore of the Arrowhead Country Resource Conservation and Development office in Winamac who was supplied valuable information. Davies also attended the monthly meeting of the Kewanna-Union Township Fire Department to discuss the dry hydrant process and any source of additional funding for the project. He noted that Jay Cunningham, assistant fire chief, along with his entire staff were very helpful and will assist the district in any way they can. The dry hydrant will be used to fight fires at the lake.

In other business, the board approved the contract with Plews, Shadley, Braun for legal representation for the sewer project at a cost not to exceed $20,000. This contract is another requirement for obtaining federal grant monies. The meeting adjourned at 8:45 p.m. The next meeting will be Thursday, June 8, at 7 p.m. in the fire station community room. The meeting is open to all freeholders and interested parties.

USDA Reminds Producers to Sign-up by June 1

Steve Brown, acting executive director for USDA's Farm Service Agency in Indiana, reminds agricultural producers that they have until June 1, 2006 to sign up for the 2006 crop Direct and Counter-cyclical Payment Program (DCP).

"This program plays an important role in the viability of rural communities across Indiana," said Brown. "I encourage farmers and growers to sign up for DCP by June 1 by visiting a USDA Farm Service Agency office or by using the convenient online DCP service."

USDA has issued more than $28 billion in DCP payments to producers since the program began in October 2002.

USDA will accept late-filed DCP applications through September 30, 2006, if accompanied by an $100 late fee. Producers will be unable to apply for 2006 DCP payments after September 30. Sign-up for the 2006 DCP began October 1, 2005.

Producers may sign-up online for DCP at www.fsa.usda.gov/egov/edcp_default.htm. Producers must have an active USDA eAuthentication Level 2 account to use the service. This requires filling out an online registration form at www.eauth.egov.usda.gov and visiting the local FSA office for identity verification.

The online service allows producers to choose 2006 DCP payment options, assign crop shares, as well as sign and submit their contracts from computers with Internet access. The service is easy to use. It reduces paperwork and speeds up contract processing at FSA offices saving time for producers and FSA employees.

More information on DCP is available at local FSA offices and in the online DCP fact sheet posted at <http://www.fsa.usda.gov/pas/publications/facts/html/dcp06.htm>. FSA's Web site is <http://fsa.usda.gov>.

Round Barn Cyclists is Born

The group that has been planning bicycle routes for public roads has decided on a name: Round Barn Cyclists. They have not organized as a club as yet, but they are planning another ride. This will be June 11, not June 3 as previously announced because of too many conflicting events. Cyclists will meet Sunday, June 11, at 1 p.m. at the Fulton County Museum and ride around Germany Bridge for a short ride or on to Culver for a longer ride. More details will be announced later.

Richard Vonnegut, Indianapolis, spoke to the group recently about the Indiana Trails Fund, which he represents. They are coordinating biking and hiking routes all over Indiana and getting local groups to hook up so the routes cross several counties. Monterey is converting its old depot into a Trails Center and will be the hub for several counties. He urged the Fulton County group to plan a route that will hook up with Monterey. He recommended planning rides that have all right turns for safety.

Vonnegut also told about the American Discovery Trail, which crosses Fulton County east to west. It can be viewed at www.discoverytrail.org. Rochester is encouraged to add its historic sites to the list. Each county court house will serve as a trail beginning at the northwest corner of the court house. He suggests guided tours about architecture, history, cemeteries, canals, and other subjects.

Indiana is also working on canoe trails on the Tippecanoe and other rivers. Hoosier Rails to Trails is clearing and paving old rail beds.

Vonnegut will attend the Governor's meeting May 31 which will plan trails and choose graphics. Look for a report in the Indianapolis Star on June 1.

THE VISITATION

Why Might We Want To Receive Friends And Family Before The Ceremony?

Sometimes called the "wake," "calling hours" or "viewing," the visitation is a time for friends and family to support one another in their grief.

Often the body is present in an open or unopened casket, allowing mourners to acknowledge the reality of the death and granting them the privilege of saying good-bye.

Receiving friends through a visitation activates your support system and allows others to express their concern and love for you.

Right Plant, Right Pot, Right Spot

by Leesa Metzger
Metzger Landscaping & Design

Designing plant combinations for container gardens seems a mystery for most homeowners. By following a few simple container design guidelines, you can ditch that confused, overwhelmed feeling that often overtakes us when surrounded by hundreds of brightly colored, flowering lush plants at the greenhouse. When you combine plants in a pot, consider how you would arrange cut flowers in a vase. Plan for outward, upward, and even some downward movement over the rim of the container.

Some of the rules for combining plants in the garden don't hold true for container gardening. In the limited space of a pot or window box, a riot of color, even clashing colors, can be effective. Foliage is, however, as important in a container arrangement as in a garden or a cut-flower display. Consider the shapes and colors of leaves on flowering and foliage plants.

Although you should experiment and use creativity to combine plants in containers, there are some guidelines for making pleasing plant combinations. At the center of the pot place a plant that is tall and straight such as the traditional spike "dracaena" or try something new and exciting such as annual purple fountain grass to boast height and color in the center of the container. Next arrange medium sized plants around the tall center element of your design. Plant enough of the medium sized plants so they fill in the rim of the pot. Consider annuals such as ageratum, cosmos, fuchsia, impatiens, or petunias. Around the edge of the pot, between the other plants, insert trailers and floppy plants that will cascade over the rim and trail out and down, preventing the arrangement from looking top-heavy. Good annual choices are bacopa, certain trailing fuchsias, geranium "million-bells", and many trailing hybrid verbenas.

Choosing the "right" plants for your container is simple because there are really no rules as to what kind of plants can be used for container gardens. Annuals, perennials, herbs, succulents, and even cactus can be used to fill a container. Ornamental grasses as an accent in a container will add instant texture to a container. It is essential to keep in mind where a container will be placed and light conditions the pot will be exposed to. Take time to read plant tags while browsing the wide array of plant choices. Choose full shade plants for shady areas and full sun plants for bright, sunny spots.

Certainly do not forget the basis for any healthy plant: quality soil. Plants in containers face problems that don't occur in gardens. Because the soil in pots is restricted, plants cannot expand their root systems and scavenge for nutrients. As a result, high-quality soil is important. Soil additives that help to retain water such as vermiculite, perlite, or polymer crystals will help retain moisture so plant roots can uptake water more slowly and when needed. Containers should also be fertilized throughout the summer to keep them looking colorful and lush with a water soluble fertilizer.

You'll hardly be able to contain yourself this summer with the perfect pots you've created, overflowing with the right plants in the right pot located in just the right spot on your deck or patio this summer.

What's going on with my body?

As a pre-teen...that stage of life when maturing hormones are preparing to change your body dramatically...you might have asked yourself the same thing.

Now it's happening again; things are not normal any more. Perhaps you are experiencing perimenopause...the stage of life when hormones are again altering your body and your life.

This is a time when the levels of hormones produced by the aging ovaries fluctuate. You might be experiencing irregular menstrual flow and cycle, hot flashes, night sweats, mood swings, vaginal dryness, waning sexual desire, forgetfulness, trouble sleeping and fatigue.

These uncomfortable symptoms can be managed with appropriate exercise, nutrition, and medications. Schedule an appointment with your doctor to discuss the plan that is right for you.

From The Desk Of....

State Representative
ERIC A. GUTWEIN

District 16

(STATEHOUSE) May 12, 2006 –Daylight Saving Time (DST) was a free ticket for economic growth in Indiana. It is an essential tool that has already created positive results such as job growth, industry expansion, and increased economical output for the state. Indiana is in the midst of restoration and we are on the right path to creating a stronger, more prosperous state.

During the 2005 session, the debate over the very controversial topic had 55 major businesses at the Statehouse testifying in favor of DST. FedEx was just one of those companies who testified in favor of the state observing DST. During their testimony they claimed an annual loss of $1.5 million as a result of time issues. Now with Indiana observing DST, FedEx has recently announced their decision to expand its size at the Indianapolis International Airport. The expansion is projected to create 800 blue collar jobs in 2008.

Steel Dynamics, another company who testified in favor of DST, is also planning to invest $200 million to build a new mill in its Columbia City Operation, creating more than 150 jobs.

The Indiana Department of Workforce Development reported that there were 89,000 more Hoosiers employed in February 2006 than in February 2005. They also reported that Indiana has 20,000 more jobs in March 2006 than in March 2005. The states unemployment rates have dropped from 5.5% in March 2005 to 4.9% in March 2006. In the month of April alone, an estimated total of 11,625 jobs are expected to be created within the next five years.

Indiana has also moved from 18th in the nation to sixth for top business climate as well as being ranked ninth best climate for small businesses by the Small Business and Entrepreneurship Council.

These statistics may not be a direct result of Indiana's observance of DST. However, since we have started observing DST, Indiana's economy has certainly progressed and companies like FedEx and Steel Dynamics are showing their loyalty to the state by increasing their business.

I truly believe DST is bringing forth positive results for the state's economy. We must continue to make the best decisions to strengthen our state's economical value so businesses will want to stay and new businesses will develop. The future of Indiana is in the hands of our children. It is our duty to create a positive environment where they can become the successful leaders of our state.
